The value of lifting peanuts is questionable in many fields. Peanuts dug the week of September 15 and into the week of September 21 have extremely fragile vines and it most likely will be too risky to lift. Farmers will need to gauge the situation on a field by field basis. Combining will be slow. We probably had 30% dug in the region and that will help on our losses if we have dry weather for the next few weeks and can begin digging within the next few days. I will send out frost information in another Peanut Note.
